

The Case Against the Sexual Revolution

Louise Perry talks about using as much data as possible. So consider a few data points from the research as supplied by John Mark Comer in "Live No Lies".

- Happiness levels have been in decline in the US since, interestingly, the 60s. While correlation is not causation, you have to admit it's an interesting coincidence.
- In spite of the cultural narratives that state otherwise, divorce is a traumatic event for children of all ages, and we're learning it's directly tied to the rising number of people who struggle to develop intimate, healthy relationships in adulthood. Psychologists argue that the drop in those who identify as having "secure attachment" is wreaking havoc in our society.

- Consider that divorce, while cited as an example of liberation from the patriarchy, has been shown to disproportionately benefit men.

Corine Lynn Rosen, "Men v. Women: Who Does Better in a Divorce?," LegalZoom, September 16, 2020, www.legalzoom.com/articles/men-v-women-who-does-better-in-a-divorce

- Or the research on oxytocin and vasopressin, the two chemicals released by our body during sex that bring attachment systems online and causes us to bond to another person. It seems the more sexual partners you have, the less capacity your body has for intimacy.

- Or that those who cohabit before marriage are less likely to marry, and more like to get a divorce if they do, and often develop long-term trust issues.

Abigail Tucker, "What Can Rodents tell us about why Humans Love?," Smithsonian Magazine, February 2014, www.smithsonianmag.com/science-nature/what-can-rodents-tell-us-about-why-humans-love-180949441

- Or the much documented, but little talked about data on the effects of abortion on women's mental and physical health, causing some to hypothesize that the Left will eventually change its now hard-line view.

"The Long-Term Effects of Abortion," Epigee Women's Health, www.epigee.org/the-long-term-effects-of-abortion.html

- Or that 25% of children now spend a portion of their childhood without a father in the home. And the overwhelming evidence indicates that this experience is damaging for both boys and girls.

- Or that sex reassignment surgery and hormone therapy for those who identify as transgender do not benefit their emotional health (which is the main rationale behind taking those steps).

See this simple, but excellent overview of the largest study, so far: Ryan T. Anderson, "Transitioning Procedures Don't Help Mental Health, Largest Dataset Shows," The Heritage Foundation, August 3, 2020, www.heritage.org/gender/commentary/transitioning-procedures-don't-help-mental-health-largest-dataset-shows

- Or the fact that Porn is becoming increasingly violent, misogynistic, and cruel and is now a multibillion-dollar industry intentionally targeting children. (as the largest group viewing online pornography is aged between 12 and 17)

- Never mind that while the #metoo movement was dominating the headlines, the Fifty Shades of Grey trilogy – a story about male sexual domination – was becoming the highest-selling book series of the decade and one of the highest-grossing film franchises of all time.

- Never mind that that all the statistics show us that sexual abuse and sexual assault are getting worse, not better. Statistically, one of every four women will experience sexual violence at some point in their lives.
- Never mind that rape culture is a raging problem, even on the most liberal, progressive elite universities.
